

Satellite radio is the best thing to come along since FM. I listen to it daily during commutes, and it is such a joy to not have to listen to commercials for cars, furniture, fast food, cell phones, or other stuff I don't want or need. I have been listening to the newest broadcasts of weather and traffic on XM, and am looking forward to having it for my area (later this year in San Diego). It would be of great value to me to be able to hear the current traffic reports when I need them, not when they happen to come on broadcast radio. This is the age of instant communication. Please let the technology go forward, not backward.
